LOVE THY NEIGHBOR?

Pedigo should follow Christ's loving example

The Rev. Tom Pedigo's hypothesis is that because the Centers for Disease Control says the majority of HIV/AIDS cases in America are male homosexuals, it is not OK to be gay ("Who says it's OK to be gay?" Letters, March 15). Then, to extrapolate from his opinion, we must accept that it is not OK to be heterosexual because the vast majority of HIV/AIDS cases around the world (estimated to be up to 90 percent) are in heterosexual people.

I am a Christian and I embarrassed that an ordained person is not spreading the message of Christ "to love one another as I love you." This message means to me that we are to love all others and Christ loves us, that is even to death, "for one has no love greater that this, to lay one's life down for his friend."

Gays are deserving of society's acceptance

Rev. Tom Pedigo's comment pertaining to "intellectually honest people" only applies to those of us he deems worthy and prudish enough for his acquired taste.

Unfortunately, Pedigo does not know homelessness contributes much more toward the AIDS epidemic than homosexuality. Those who are willing to withstand the criticism religious organizations use to convert us into ideal citizens deserve society's acceptance. Intellectualism comes from groups of people interested in adjusting preconceptions we possess because of false statements and statistics authority figures, such as Pedigo, throw around carelessly.
